

For pure cynicism I give you this account of the boys who write those financial forecast sheets and mail 'em out for a fee to the sucker list. The story comes from "This Is Investment Management," by H. G. Carpenter, Scarborough Press, reviewed by William Fletcher in Imperial Type Metal magazine.

"The most philosophical forecaster know," writes Mr. Carpenter, "is a one-man service which comes out from time to time with the most extravagant forecasts imaginable. I asked him once why he did it; why he did not qualify his prophecies, so that he would have something to fall back on if his forecast turned out to be wrong."

"I asked him also if he did not lose most of his customers when one of his forecasts turned out to be exactly the opposite of what actually took place."

"Sure I do," he replied. "When I am wrong, I lose them all. On the other hand, when I am right, I am very right, and subscriptions come pouring in."

"You see, the people to whom my service appeals believe that someone must know what is going to happen. They like positive statements. They don't have any faith in those wishy-washy, hedged pronouncements that can be construed either way. If I am wrong, they leave me as they would a sinking ship. But another 'ad' will bring in a new bunch of them."

There you have the confession of a financial forecaster. Reminds one of the late W. C. Fields' immortal crack: "You can't cheat an honest man." The inference being that anyone foolish enough to subscribe for one of these get-rich-quick stock sheets is asking for anything he gets.

Of course the learned writers of these so-called financial letters are within the law. They're merely passing out advice—not actually selling you the securities which they mention. I once knew a crowd who were no more cynical than these fellows, but overstepped the law by directly soliciting money for the securities their letters recommended.

Back in the El Dorado oil boom day of 1923-24 there were dozens of so-called syndicates which got out marvelous letters to suckers from coast to coast offering shares in wildcat wells. Incredibly as it seems, thousands of people actually sent money to perfect strangers on the strength of a mimeographed letter. The government put those letter-writers in prison.

There is a legitimate field for financial writing. You find it on the wires of the great press associations, and in the specialized pages of the New York and Chicago newspapers. But they don't give you yes or no answers like the tipsters—like all honest reporters they merely hazard a doubtful guess.

But doubtful guesses are enough for some people. "They believe," as the author quoted the tipster, "someone must know what is going to happen." And so they come to grief.

I don't excuse the wolf who preys on the pocketbooks of the incredulous, but on the other hand the men who put their names on sucker lists are poor specimens to call themselves descendants of cautious forefathers. In colonial days such saps would have been kicked out of the settlement—and the Indians would have scalped them.

Now all they lose is their shirt.

Impersonating Officer, Jailed

Lite Rock, July 27—(AP)—The federal bureau of investigation officer here has arrested two Conway men on charges of impersonating FBI agents.

M. Wilson McFarlin, special agent in charge of the office here, identified the pair as Woody B. Crafton, 25, and "Red" Brooks, 30.

He said the men allegedly represented themselves as FBI agents to a Faulkner county Negro farm family July 1. The family complained that the men after finding a bottle of whiskey on the farm, demanded $100 for a "fine." The complainants said they gave $25 to the men.

Original Plan of Little River Dam Is Favored

The Rev. E. D. Galloway, superintendent of the Hope District, Lite Rock Conference of the Methodist Church, is one of 400 delegates to the world-wide conference of Methodist churches to be held at Oxford, England, August 26-September 7. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Galloway.

Officially termed the Eighth Ecumenical Conference—the first held in London in 1881—the convocation will bring together 1,000 delegates representing 24 branches of Methodism in 27 countries. The meeting is held every 10 years to plan a joint program for the next decade.

Dallas, July 26—(AP)—Representatives of three states conferred here today with corps of engineers officials on whether one dam or six dams would best control floods on the Little River.

Representatives of Louisiana Oklahoma and Arkansas met with Col. Louis W. Prentiss, southwestern division engineer for the Army Corps of Engineers.

The Little River is a major tributary of the Red River and its flood storage facilities in the future will have a marked effect on flood stages and discharges on the Red River below Denison in Texas and Louisiana, Colonel Prentiss said.

The Millwood Dam, estimated to cost $47,000,000 when authorized in the 1946 Flood Control Act, would create a giant reservoir stretching out of Arkansas into southeastern Oklahoma.

Congress appropriated funds in 1950 for planning on the Millwood Reservoir, but at the request of local interests, also authorized studies of a multiple series of dams on the river.

The studies were made by the Tulsa District of the Engineers.

Colonel Prentiss said that the studies were to determine whether smaller dams could accomplish the same purpose as economically as the Millwood Dam.

Sherman Laid to Rest in Washington

By ELTON C. FAY

Washington, July 27 (AP) — There was a grave today in Arlington National Cemetery for Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, on a knoll where oak trees stand tall and straight like the masts of a ship.

They chose that burial place for the 84-year-old member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and chief of naval operations who died in Italy last Sunday while on a military-diplomatic mission to help strengthen the defenses of the Western nations.

In tribute to that great man, President Truman characterized him yesterday, there gathered for funeral service this afternoon in the Arlington amphitheater a company of the nation's highest governmental and military leaders.

Because he was of the combined high command, contingents of soldiers and sailors and airmen of all the services came to march in the cortège across the Potomac and up the curving avenues of Arlington to the amphitheater — more than 800 in the white, khaki and blues.

General he was an aviator, the general directed that if weather permitted a formation of 133 aircraft fighters and attack planes pay a last aerial salute.

To the services were invited men whose names were well known, like Sherman's, in the greatest war the navy ever fought. Among them were white-hair Fleet Admiral Chester Nimitz, five-star Admiral William D. Leahy, Admiral "Tommy" Kinkaid. They are all retired. But others still alive came from their commands, some and distant bonds. The money from the bond issue would be used to finance the work estimated to cost $500,000, pay off indebtedness and reimburse the company treasury.

Admiral Sherman will have navy men for close neighbors at Arlington. Twenty paces from his grave is a simple stone, telling that there lies "James Forrestel Detonum, U. S. N. R." — who also was secretary of the navy and the nation's first secretary of defense. A little beyond is the grave of Rear Admiral Cary Grayson, who was Woodrow Wilson's naval aid and physician. From the graveside could be seen the spires of Washington National Cathedral, where Sherman's body lay at rest before the funeral.

The year had been swift and full since "Fuzz" Sherman was graduated from the naval academy at Annapolis and became an ensign, in time to serve on a cruiser in Mediterranean waters in World War I.

He didn't see combat then, but he found plenty when the next world war came along — abeam on the bridge of his burning and tor-

Gas Company Seeks to Extend

Little Rock, July 27 (AP) — Arkansas-Western Gas Co., Fayetteville, wants to string 26 miles of transmission lines in northwest Arkansas.

The firm yesterday asked the Arkansas public service commission for authority to construct the lines and to issue $1,350,000 in bonds. The money from the bond issue would be used to finance the work estimated to cost $500,000, pay off indebtedness and reimburse the company treasury.

and much more recently than my father. In fact, I was there a year ago."

Lawrence Colton paused for effect.

"Well, aren't you going to ask me if I brought back a Gila Monster?"

"Should I?" Baker found himself resenting the way this unpopular youth was leading the conversation, patronizing him and in general making him feel like a country bumpkin.

"Please do."

"All right, did you bring back a Gila Monster?"

"Why do you persist in saying 'Gila Monster'? Don't you know that Gila Monsters travel in pairs, like other reptiles?"

Baker was rocked by the thought.

"Do they?" he demanded.

"Of course. They are usually caught in pairs, for where you find one such lizard you are very apt to find its mate."

Baker reflected, then said: "Are you suggesting that there's very likely another Gila Monster in this vicinity?"

"I certainly am. If I were a minor in the law, I most certainly would keep an eye open for it."

Baker hadn't known Johnnie McAdams' laugh. Johnnie came forward, grinning broadly.

"Have to apologize for Put's temper," he said. "If I'd known she was going to take your interrogation of her father so seriously, I wouldn't have told her about it."

Baker hadn't known Johnnie McAdams' laugh was in the courtroom.

"Well, thanks, pal."

HE turned on his heel and walked to his car. Just as he reached it a rather weak, thin voice said:

"An uninhibited type, my sister." Baker turned. Lawrence Colton eyed him through thick-lensed glasses. His expression was that of a youth who knows that he is not well received and does not expect a friendly look. Most of Coltonville resented him, and he knew it. He had a way of looking at others as if they were laboratory specimens, and not too zoologically advanced specimens at that.

"I must say that I find your reported questioning of my father quite uncalled for. The suggestion that he might have secretly maintained a live Gila Monster contained an obvious and repugnant inference. You might have subpoenaed me for the inquest and asked me the same question. I, too, have traveled much in Arizona,

OVERCOMING his resentment at the youth's expression, "minor of the law," Baker asked:

"Do you have any ideas about where you should start looking?"

"You might check with the local express and freight offices."

"I have. I'm not quite the dunderhead you think I am."

Lawrence Colton lifted his brows slightly. "I apologize if that is the impression I gave you. I'm afraid I have a very tactless manner of speech. I was only trying to be helpful. It may not interest you, but the fact is that I want to see my mother's murderer brought to book. My interest is more than academic."

"Of course it is. I'm grateful for your suggestions. Any more?"

"Yes. I have. You might find out who has been collecting worms, centipedes, frogs, and bird eggs. Such are the food of the Gila Monster."

A crowd milled around the plant yesterday but police dispersed it.

Ford, comprising of a series of strikes, told Reuther "we don't think" that the UAW leadership "appreciates the seriousness of the situation."

The one worker in question, a member of local #223, was reportedly laid off for his part in an earlier strike.

Alex Hunter, plant manager, charged that unionists had threatened reprisals against employees who refused to strike, but Ken Bannon, the UAW national Ford director, denied this.

Bannon said there had been no violence or threats of violence. On the other hand, Hunter said there had been threats to "turn homes and damage cars" of employees.

Mass layoffs resulted.

The Dodge dispute hinges on the firing of two men for failure to meet production rates. Strikers accused the company of contract violation in increasing the rates.

BROS.*Gazette Is Threatened, Hearing Told

Little Rock, July 27 -- (AP) — The national labor relations board has been told an officer of the CIO American Newspaper Guild once threatened to "destroy" the Arkansas Gazette.

The NLRB is hearing charges of unfair labor practices against the Gazette, the result of the strike by 23 newsmen and 10 circulation employees in December, 1949. The strike ended three months of unsuccessful efforts by the union and company to negotiate a contract.

Robert S. Lindsey, a Gazette attorney, took the stand last night at the first night session of the lengthy hearing.

He attributed the statement to Sam B. Eubanks, former executive vice president of the guild. Lindsey said that at a conference he attended after a strike of 35 Gazette employees has started, Eubanks told Editor J. N. Heiskell that if the Gazette did not settle the strike the guild would have no recourse "except to make every effort to destroy the Gazette."

Earlier, Gazette City Editor Sam G. Harris admitted that he talked against unionization of newsroom employees despite a warning from a superior to keep quiet.

Harris testified that Executive Editor Harry S. Ashmore told him not to discuss formation of Local 209 of the guild with members of his staff.

"I told him at the time he was a little late," Harris said. J. O. Turner, assistant city circulation manager at the time of union activity in the Gazette circulation department, also testified last night.

He denied statements of several circulation strikers that he tried to stop employees from joining the union.

they will attend a union meeting.

Hospital Notes

Branch
Admitted—James Hollis, Hope; Clifton Formby, Patmos; Jaunita Powers, Washington.Sunday School Lesson

By William E. Gilroy, D. D.

I have always objected to the term "the social gospel." The phrase is as objectionable as it would be to speak of "the individual gospel". More right and proper it is to speak only of "the Gospel," as a gospel for individuals and for society, inasmuch as individuals live in social relationships and no man stands alone.

So far as I am concerned "social preaching" is another poorly termed phrase. My preaching has always been Biblical. No matter what theme I might discuss, or how close its relationship to some issue in the community, or in national or community life, my sermon has been based upon the Bible.

The Bible in its religious teaching and in its records of God's dealing with man, and the denials of men with another is a profound and inexhaustible textbook of sociology.

There is no problem in society today, or in the life of a modern nation, that is not exemplified, with some very clear teaching if men would seek it, in the concentrated history of the Jewish people as set forth in the Old Testament histories and prophecies.

The causes of social disintegration, of national disruption, decay, and disaster, are there set forth as reason as day; and there is no reason whatever to assume that those causes do not operate as they did then.

It was in the seemingly most prosperous periods in the life of Israel that the seeds of downfall were sown. The glory of Solomon darkened with gloom, when the people torn by oppression rebelled under Rehoboam, Solomon's son, and the divided kingdom began its way toward the ruin and dispersion of the people of the North and the exile of the people of the South.

When the prophet Amos saw the righteous being sold for a pair of shoes, and the alters of religion being increased, without and corresponding righteousness and justice, He saw full well what the end would be, and he fearlessly declared His message, even though it meant his own destruction.

Christ's gospel for society took into all the wholesome teaching and experience that had gone before. With even greater sternness than those of old time He denounced the continuing sins and social evils of His day. If one doubts it, or minimizes the social impact of the teaching of Jesus, let him turn to that catalogue of "Woes" in Matthew 23.

But Christ had no gospel for society that did not have its rise and its place in individual hearts and lives. If there was one thing upon which Jesus insisted it was the value and worth of the individual life. It was the outstanding message of the parable of the Ninety-and-Nine, or of the Lost Sheep—that and the fact of God's persistent seeking of even one.

In a democracy, in particular, that insisters upon the value of the individual, and upon his responsibility, should never be weakened. We are wont to define democracy in terms of the rule of the majority, but majority decisions do not make anything wise, or right. The true basis of democracy is self-rule, which means that every man is his own king. God help society when the king abdicates!

Tucker Prison Farm, July 27 -- (AP) — Aubrey Smith, 31-year-old Negro, died in the state's electric chair here this morning after admitting again that he had slain St. Francis County Deputy Sheriff Rany Campbell nearly a year ago.

Just before two charges of electricity took his life at 6:05 a. m. Smith was asked by Prison Supt. Lee Henslee:

"Are you guilty of the crime of which you were convicted?"

The five-foot, 11-inch Negro nodded his head and mumbled: "Uh huh."

Then he went to his death without uttering another word.

Before his trial in Phillips county on a charge of murder, Smith signed a statement that he had fired the fatal shot in an automobile in which Campbell and another officer were taking him and a second east Arkansas Negro from Little Rock to Forrest City to face charges of cow theft.

The other Negro, Peter Dorsey, also was convicted but his execution is being stayed by an appeal to the U. S. Supreme court.

Death sentences of both Smith and Dorsey were upheld by the Arkansas Supreme court.

Smith and Dorsey, handcuffed together in the back seat of the officers' car, overpowered Campbell and Forrest City Marshal Ous Tatum, taking their guns last Aug. 3. Both officers were shot, but Tatum recovered.

Dorsey was captured without resistance near Forrest City the next day. Smith was wounded and nabbed, also near Forrest City, two days after the killing. He signed a statement that he and not Dorsey fired the pistol shot that killed Campbell.

Tatum was one of the 25 persons who attended the execution today. So was St. Francis County Sheriff Roger West.

None of Smith's relatives witnessed the execution or visited the condemned man yesterday or last night.

DOROTHY DIX*Forbearing Wife

Dear Miss Dix: Since the beginning of my marriage twenty years ago, my husband has been involved with other women. For the sake of my daughter, I have held the marriage together but now she is grown and about to begin a life of her own. I wonder if it was the right thing for me to do. Here I am in my early forties with nothing to look forward to. I have lots of friends, and family, but are they enough? I have a little money of my own, so am not completely dependent on my husband. We have always avoided arguments, for our daughter's sake, but it's been years since we've made an outside appearance together. I know there's no hope for anything better in my marriage, and wonder if it wouldn't be better to give my husband a divorce he wants so that I will at least find a little happiness in peace of mind. Or should I go on being his housekeeper?

not let me entertain them. He won't let me go any place where I'll meet boys so I have to sneak out with my girl friends who can have dates. I am 15. My relatives and friends have tried to convince him that he is wrong but it doesn't do any good.

Answer: You've done a valiant job keeping a home together for your daughter, and now she is safely

"this" to the episode. Peace of

On the tip of most every tongue, 'civilization-wide,' the dreaded story of the ATOMIC BOMB is being whispered. Hardships, infirmities, agonies and inconceivable distress, only partially paint the horrible scene which must follow every Atomic Eruption. O Lord, give us strong men of courage, and men who fear God . . . men imbued with certain principles of justice and brotherly love, to guide us in these history-making days.

The age of the harnessing of God's minute atom has long since been a reality. Skilled scientists have celebrated the occasion for years. Man now has the achievement and must control its use. It is time for the genuine love of God to reign in the hearts of men if civilization is to survive.

When it becomes practical for the ingenuity of man, as is now the case, to concoct instruments of inconceivable power that can rip the earth into canyons, lift and wreck 'skyscrapers' more easily than a strong man can break a straw, and with the heat of Hell burn to dust every object near the point of its eruption . . . then, brother, it's time for all mankind to 'GET ON SPEAKING TERMS WITH GOD.'

The whole world seems to be in constant fear of this terrific weapon. Nations seem to be at 'loggerhead' . . . they do not trust each other. Their acts and sayings are questioned; their conclusions censured. They are in a race to avoid the calamity of the immortal phrase, "TOO FEW AND TOO LATE."

Christians must meet the challenge of the Atomic Age. The doctrine of BROTH-ERLY LOVE must prevail. This is an era when giants in the field of business, and fabulously rich in the material wealth of the world, are scattering their shekels in the interest of religion. The church must not be denied. Help keep her good work going by attending your church regularly. Help her mold men to control the Atom.

Most Areas Hit by Hot Weather

By The Associated Press

The summer season's hottest and most humid weather showed no signs of a letup today over the eastern half of the country.

Record high readings for the season were set in many cities yesterday as temperatures soared into the 90s.

Thunderstorms hit in northwest Illinois, the Lake Superior region and in a belt from Iowa through Nebraska to the central Rockies.

Showers also were reported in the southeastern states and western Arkansas. Heaviest rainfalls included 3.30 inches at Escanaba, Mich.; 1.84 inches at Burlington, Ia., and 1.59 inches at Montgomery, Ala.

A moderate change to cooler was moving slowly over the northern Great Lakes region today.

Employment Offices Fill Many Jobs

Advance) . . . Washington, July 27—(AP)—State employment offices filled more jobs in the first year after the Korean fighting began than in any previous postwar year, the bureau of employment security reported today.

Robert C. Goodwin, bureau director, said more than 14,000,000 jobs on farms and in manufacturing and other non-agricultural fields had been filled in the fiscal year ended July 30.

The farm placements numbered 7,774,000; others, 6,497,000. The farm placements were slightly under the preceding year but there was a 37 per cent rise in non-agricultural fields.

Women were placed in 2,369,000 jobs, an increase of 22 per cent.
